Gov't Wins Vote On Arms, 69-13

MORALITY — the old, familiar kind — has become a bit frayed at the edges. Like "19th century Liberalism," it seems to have had its gracious day. Now the thing to be is "realistic" — to set an end and be damned about the means.

The Krupps, for example, are to get the equivalent of 35 million pounds sterling in "compensation." Now, we all know about Krupps, how they armed the Germans of the Franco-Prussian War, and the Germans of the 1914-18 war and the Germans of the 1939-45 war and became ennobled for their pains. They were the biggest armament manufacturers in the wide, wide world in those days and on their bullets and shrapnel and bomb-casings were written the names of some tens of millions of common or garden folk from France, Britain, Belgium, Russia, even America. Anyway they are to be put on the shelf again — Krupps, not the tens of millions.

PERHAPS, without risking the stir of "19th century Liberalism" — or of early 20th century Social Democracy for that matter — one may enquire what this means: what a revived Krupps portends. In London it is said that if Krupps makes arms they cannot make export goods with which to swamp markets now valuable to Britain. In Washington it is said that if Krupps makes arms, the military shortages in other West European countries won't matter so much. In each case the explanation is "the of realism": not quite the whole realism, of course; for there is no knowing what the Germans ultimately will do with the arms when they get them. At least it may be argued, very modestly, that perhaps we are running a risk; unless it can be said, as used to be said in the "thirties" that the Germans and the Russians will one day fight it out between them and exhaust each other and leave the rest of us to pick up the pieces.

ALL this has nothing to do with the policy of the Atlantic Treaty nations or the policy of the Soviet Bloc. It is merely a question which the curious mind may still have the right to ask. There are several such rightful questions; and most of them, oddly, touch Germany.

FOR example, if you read this paper yesterday you will have noticed that a Yugoslav mother has been applying through the German courts for the return of her boy Ivan, aged 21 years, who was kept by a former Nazi S.S. after his father had been shot by the Germans and his mother sent to Auschwitz. The German court, by two to one, refused the mother's request. She then took the case to the U.S. High Commission Court of Appeal at Frankfurt, which upheld the German court's decision, saying: "Although Yugoslavia seems not as bad socially as most Communist dictatorships, we think it compares unfavourably economically with free enterprises in Western Germany as a place to be brought up in."

HERE, of course, is a new and extremely interesting judicial standpoint — that is, if the report from Frankfurt is true. It is very difficult to believe that it is true. If it is true, then no juridical titans outside Germany can dislodge the fact that a judgment of extraordinary significance has been given, about which we should know a little more if only to enable us — even those of us who are "realists" and just as contemptuous of 19th century Liberalism as any Communist — to adjust our minds to a new set of values.

AFTER all, it is probably not beyond human capacity to be at the same time realistic and intelligent; just as, we may be quite sure, it is well within the capacity of the Western nations to fulfil their mission without too much reliance on institutions like Krupps and without such an extraordinary variation of Solomon's judgment as that given at Frankfurt.

Compulsory Tax On Property Tabled

The Compulsory Property Tax or Loan Bill, the second part of the compulsory loan introduced with the exchange of currency last June, is to be tabled in the Knesset on August 23. It was announced in Jerusalem yesterday.

It is understood that the Bill gives property owners a free choice between a levy or a 15-year loan. The loan will be graduated from six to 12 per cent of the property's value, and the tax from three to six per cent.

The tax must be paid within three years, and the loan within a much shorter period. If the value of the property does not exceed IL 10,000, the first IL 5,000 will be exempt.

The amount exempted will gradually decrease for property valued at more than IL 10,000 until at IL 15,000 there will be no exemptions. If rent from houses and apartments is the investor's only income, the first IL 5,000 will be exempt even if the total evaluation exceeds IL 10,000.

The Bill includes detailed instructions for evaluating and classifying property.

Finance Minister Levi Eshkol yesterday received a delegation of foreign investors who asked that their exemption from the loan be extended to the tax as well.

Mr. Eshkol said that their request be examined by such as Finance Minister and the Foreign Affairs Committee. He said that the Bill contained a paragraph which granted exemption to certain investors in accordance with the recommendations of the Government of Iran.

Mr. Sharrett said that the Mapam speaker had misrepresented the facts and their real significance when he said that a foreign power would have jurisdiction over the use of the arms. However, Mr. Sharrett did not attempt to enlighten the Druze. He said that the Foreign Affairs and Security Committee had left it to the Government to decide if and when details of the agreement should be made public, and the Government had not yet reached a decision.

Not All "Vegetarians"

Pointing to the Mapam benches, Mr. Sharrett said "some of them are not at all 'vegetarians' — and they know well enough that the State of Israel lacks the weapons needed for their defense — and that there is one and only one source where these weapons can be obtained."

Mr. Sharrett made it clear that the agreement of July 23 still did not make it certain that arms could be obtained from that source.

In his speech introducing the non-confidence motion, Mr. Ben-Aharon quoted chapter and verse from the American Mutual Security Act in order to show that acceptance of this form of military aid would deprive Israel of its autonomy and would deny her the right to maintain its national relations. He also said it would cut Israel from millions of friends in the free world. The 2,000,000 Jews referred to in the 1939 armistice agreement were to be exempted from the armistice in effect, he said, if it would make Israel a partner in the war preparations.

Mr. Sharrett answered: "It is not true that the U.S. needs these arms and if in order to acquire them it will be necessary to enter into the State of Israel to enter certain commitments, she will enter these commitments and only these commitments will be made. She will enter them if it will be worthwhile for her to acquire the arms and maintain its independence." But he said plainly that until such an agreement is negotiated, the terms of the armistice agreement will not apply to Israel.

Mr. Sharrett sharply attacked Mapam and said their stand against the arms deal was based on the defense understanding that acceptance of this form of military aid would deprive Israel of its autonomy and would deny her the right to maintain its national relations. He also said it would cut Israel from millions of friends in the free world. Three bills had their first readings last night:

1) An amendment to the Company's Income Tax Act which provides for the possibility of companies to register their capital in foreign currency.

2) An amendment to the Tel Aviv Order (Financial Institutions) enabling the Government to require that the bank from IL 2,000,000 to IL 5,000,000 to increase the Government's revolving fund for the export of foreign currency.

3) An amendment to the Government's Finance and Progressives' spokesman to read statements designed to remove doubts that the motion might indicate that they had confidence in the Government.

During Mr. Ben-Aharon's speech, the Foreign Minister, Mr. David Ben-Gurion, read an evening newspaper which he held up before his face.

Teachers In Capital Serve Ultimatum

Jerusalem POST Reporter

Jerusalem teachers will not report for work next Thursday when the schools re-open unless they receive their July and August salaries by that time, it was decided yesterday at a general meeting of teachers at the Leumi School.

Even if they are paid by that date it is doubtful whether the schools will open on time since the teachers are also refusing to arrange the numerous technical details that must be made at least a week before school starts.

The decision, which has Hizbatur approval, also provided that expenses (interest paid on loans) accrued during the period in which payment was not forthcoming should be included in any settlement. It was also voted that in the future an automatic strike will go into force on the fourth day of the month if salaries are not paid by that date.

The chief reason for the failure to pay the salaries is a running dispute between the Jerusalem Municipality and the Ministry of Education over the grant of funds to be made by the Government to support local education. Heretofore, the Government has been paying 80 per cent of the total bill, but has recently sought to reduce this sum to 75 per cent.

Jesse End's UJA Trip

Jerusalem POST Reporter

Mr. George Jesse, well-known American film producer and veteran showman, wound up his whirlwind tour of Israeli schools yesterday. He was received with a fruitfully surprising show and a very informal appearance.

Mr. Jesse, who holds the unofficial title of "Ambassador of the United States," met scores of people, ranging from Yeminite farmers on the northern frontier to the Acting President, Prime Minister, Minister of Foreign Affairs and Chairman of the Jewish Agency Executive.

"I venture the opinion that I never saw more than that Ben-Gurion, or a very good one," he said, as he dined yesterday in an easy chair at the King David Hotel, smoking his beribboned with oak cane holding a gigantic cigar in the ashtray.

Accompanied by his 17-year-old daughter, Jeryln, he spent a week in Israel, visiting the country's cultural and new housing and agricultural settlements from Upper Galilee to the Negev. Mr. Jesse, a film producer and a folklorist, is on a three-months' tour for the United Jewish Appeal.
